Tiger shifter and businessman, Shaun always wanted to spend more time with the child his ex-wife took away from him -- but he wasn't expecting her to abandon five-year old Trevor and force Shaun to move to the tiny town of Green Valley. It's bad enough that Shaun doesn't know the first thing about being a father -- now suddenly he's the father of an unpredictable shifter child. Hawk shifter and preschool teacher, Andrea knows better than to fall for Trevor's father -- no matter how good he looks with a colander on his head. But the electricity between them is impossible to resist, and when the lights in his house go out, the sparks that fly aren't only in the fuse box. Abandoned by his mother, all that Trevor has ever asked for is love and stability, and Shaun is determined to give that to him at any cost. Even if it means denying that the hot next door neighbor is his destined mate. What's more stubborn -- fate, or a five-year-old?
