Da'Quan 'Quan' Griffin received love in epic proportions. Coming from a childhood that wasn't idealistic, he didn't lack love and attention. Experiencing the copious amount of love surrounding him, instilled in him to want the type of love that's gotta be better than the one he's received. He finds what he believes is exactly the love he's seen all his life. There's a dilemma, his chosen career may keep him from receiving that love. Will he choose the love he craves, or the career he's worked hard to achieve? Don't dress like that? Boys are not what you need to focus on. Books, and not booty, will take you far. Premarital sex is for hussies, and will lead you to eternal damnation, was all Iveyanna Middleton heard growing up, from her overly religious grandmother, may she rest in Heaven. She knows love, sort of, she does believe anything has got to be better than what she's known. When given the chance to receive a love like she has never known, does she hold on to the teachings of her grandmother, or does she, for the first time, follow her heart? Ghymyrie Wilson, better known as Gee, and cousin to Quan. He grew up similar to Quan. So, he knows love and craziness. He's also has experienced hate and jealousy. He's ready to give love, but like always, something tries to get in his way. Does he let it, or will he be the man he was raised to be, and claim what he deems is his? Seanna Martinez knows a lot of things, but love ain't really one of them. She knows hard work just to survive, and pain, when surviving became too much. She's a broken soul that wants to be fixed. There's just a little problem. The love she deserves, comes from one she's afraid of. Overcoming her doubts and fears may lead her to a love a helluva lot better than the one she has known. Ain't no better love than the one I got; no one can love me better. Do you believe that?
